

Rob Ross

Rob has been active in the seafood and aquaculture industries for many years. His primary focus has been in the area of legislative advocacy and governmental affairs for both industries and he represents the best interests of the members of the California Fisheries and Seafood Institute and the California Aquaculture Association. Seafood harvested by commercial fishing or produced by culturing fish and shellfish on land and sea are vital parts on our economy and should be protected, promoted and enhanced at every opportunity.